why^{the}Works? the Works are...

multi-level

The Works' materials are designed for use with Levels Pre-K through High School.

multi-student

Instructions for all appropriate grade levels are contained within each Lesson or Step, making it ideal for teaching more than one grade level at the same time. All students do the work at the lowest level with more advanced students doing the additional expectancies.

multi-school year

The method builds sequentially year after year upon what students already know in incremental steps of ever increasing difficulty. Confusion is minimized and consistency is maintained throughout Pre-K - High School as the same definitions, skills, and expectancies are progressively enhanced and expanded upon in each higher level of instruction.

multi-sensory

Reading Works covers handwriting, spelling, phonics and reading, and, as it discusses the history of our language, it teaches about word origins and vocabulary. At the point at which students can form simple sentences, Grammar Works complements Reading Works with basic grammar skills from parts of speech, sentence construction, and punctuation to paragraphs, outlines, letter writing, library skills, book reports, and more. Writing Works completes the curriculum with composition and advanced grammar skills.

cost & time efficient

The 'Works' materials provide word-for-word teacher dialogue requiring direct student-teacher instruction at beginning levels. Efficiency is maximized when students can be instructed simultaneously or more advanced students can learn as they instruct younger students. Evaluation is a result of teacher-student interaction rather than lengthy correcting of worksheets and/or workbooks.
